Tangkup Waterfall, Rice Field & Bamboo Forest Traverse

A short traverse trail exploring Undisan’s Bamboo forest, Subak systems of Bali in breezy paddy fields, and discovering a cool green canyon with a waterfall. Visiting Tangkup Waterfall requires a steep descent into the canyon and through the ankle-deep river, a lovely reward

75% of trails are well-defined paved trails (easy), but 25% is a steep descent down to the Green Canyon River valley (easy-medium) from the Tangkup Waterfall. Exercise caution and attentiveness, particularly on descents and short slopes, where careful foot placement is essential. Although the trail does not require fording a river without a bridge, accessing Tangkup Waterfall necessitates a river crossing.

Upon reaching the canyon, a short 50-meter downstream walk in the river leads to Tangkup Waterfall (the water is ankle-deep and the riverbed is flat with sandy silt underfoot). Your experienced guides will assess the conditions for a safe passage, ensuring your enjoyment and safety throughout the journey. Be mindful of slippery stones both underwater and above, and heed the guidance and support of your knowledgeable guides for a secure and memorable experience.

This trail starts at Yang Api Market and finishes at D’Klumpu, a locally-owned eco-resort with delicious farm-to-table restaurant tea, fresh coffee here, and a lavatory.
